Sick thinking Pro tip: Don't fall on the ice

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

It's time for the other March of the Penguins.

Many a Chicagoan has been there—when the mad dash for the evening bus turns into slapstick comedy as commuters slip, slide and fall on the neverending network of icy sidewalks this winter.

Record cold snaps and the return of the polar vortex are bringing more ice to city streets, but that doesn't mean anyone should be busting ass if it can be avoided.

While we were shuffling around our carpeted office Wednesday afternoon, RedEve called on experts in walking on slick surfaces (yes, they exist) to tell us how it's done.

1. Walk like a penguin

"The challenge is, most of us walk with very big strides that take our center of gravity away from us, making it really easy to slip," said Ken Ramirez, the executive vice president of animal care and training at the Shedd Aquarium.

"Taking little tiny steps like penguins do can be really helpful. Even when you're in a hurry, you just have to take small steps, and you'll get there faster because you won't be falling."

2. Imagine you're a glass of water?

Tom Moose, 31, a sales lead at the R.E.I. in Lincoln Park, said people should imagine a glass of water and shift their weight delicately.

"If you think about it, walking and running is basically just falling when you catch yourself," he said. "Think of walking like pouring water from one glass to another. That's how you should pour your weight into your next foot."

3. Special footgear would be nice

Moose, who has hiked the grueling Appalachian Trail and the Pacific Crest Trail, said his go-to plan for preventing bad winter slips includes a product called YakTrax, which are stainless steel coils that can be strapped over shoes to create more friction between feet and the slippery ground. The product is designed for walkers, runners and other winter athletes.

Whether one wants to invest in extra foot gear for navigating the trek from apartment to train or not, Moose recommends people pay careful attention to the bottoms of their shoes.

"Any sort of [rubber] sole is going to be stickier than anything else, but if you wear all the tread off your shoes, you're out of luck," he said. For example, "the bottom of a running shoe is going to be much flatter because you're trying to move fast."

YakTrax traction shoes

4. Don't get cocky

Jennifer Hsu, a doctoral candidate at the Toronto Rehabilitation Institute, who researches shoes that help limit ice slips, said people often slip when they get too confident with their footing on ice.

"Frequency of slips is helped by cleats, but when you do slip you actually can have quite a big dangerous slip," she said. "We think that's because when you wear [cleats] you gain a sense of confidence in them, and rather than walking like a penguin your walk is a bit more risky than it should be."

Hsu also recommends people slow their walk, planning for extra time to get where they need to go, take smaller steps and walk "flat-footed" by striking the ground with the entire foot, as opposed to the heel or the ball of the foot.

Of course, not even the best shoes will save someone who isn't using common sense.

"You have to be aware," she said. "Even if you have very good shoes, if the snow doesn't clear from the bottom of the shoe, you're just walking with snow on top of a slippery surface—and that will be extremely slippery."

Dark side of comic-cons

Elliott redeye@

When I think about comic-book and sci-fi conventions, I think about having fun. I think about geeky folks dressed in colorful costumes, rummaging through countless boxes filled with old back-issues and meeting celebrities from their favorite TV shows and movies. But it's not all fun and games.

The ugly side of conventions was exposed last week when organizers for Chicago's Chi-Fi Con, which celebrates geekdom with programming on genres including science fiction and fantasy, alternative history, British media and comics, pulled out of an arrangement with a vendor last week after, according to them, they were unable to reach an agreement on an anti-harassment policy. Apparently they wanted the policy that applies to attendees to apply to hotel staff as well, and that just didn't work out.

For all the discussion the incident has created, the most common question I've heard as RedEve's Resident Geek is "what's an antibarassment policy?" The idea that they even exist comes as a surprise to some, especially in conjunction with events like comic-cons that are often assumed to be family-friendly events.

But there are real concerns.

Anti-harassment policies exist to police behaviors that have become all too commonplace at comic-cons. For examples of what has gone on, you need look only to the Chi-Fi Con website and their anti-harassment policy, which prohibits actions such as physical assault, stalking and unwelcome physical attention. These behaviors, while not often talked about, are actually common occurrences for regular attendees to the world of cons.

One of my geek gal pals told me that one year at the New York Comic Con she got groped from behind so many times she stopped counting. It's as if some folks decide that seeing a woman in a form-fitting costume gives them license to throw the rules of decency and respecting personal space out the camouflage of crowded convention center halls and escalators to take "upskirt" shots of female cosplayers to later post on the Internet. It's because of this behavior that conventions need to take the common sense practice of treating others with respect and make it policy.

I know of unsavory characters who use the

When you consider that the largest conventions in the city, Chicago Comic and Entertainment Expo (C2E2) and Wizard World Chicago, both have anti-harassment policies in place, you know it's something that's taken seriously.

Chicago TARDIS-the annual "Doctor Who" convention which takes place in Lombard—also has an anti-harassment policy. Convention organizer Jennifer Adams Kelly told me that to her knowledge, there has been no issue with the policy. "The hotel itself should have anti-harassment policies as a matter of course," she says, "which would come into play should a hotel staff member be the one doing the harassing."

In the end, it's all about making these events a place where people from all different walks of life can feel welcome and safe-and most important of all, have fun.

Police officers investigate the town home in Mundelein where an Ti-year-old girl was found dead Tuesday, STACEY WESCOTT/TRIBUNE

Sister charged in murder

14-year-old stabbed 11-year-old for being ungrateful, officials say

Chicago Tribune

The 14-year-old girl from Mundelein sat without expression in a juvenile court hearing room Wednesday as Lake County prosecutors laid out the events they said had led to the teen murdering her little sister.

Dressed in gray detention center scrubs, her brown hair pulled into a ponytail, the girl remained passive until Lake County Assistant State's Attorney Claudia Kasten recounted how the teen allegedly fetched a kitchen knife, the weapon used to stab her 11-year-old sister to death.

The teen's face flushed and her eyes brimmed. The woman sitting beside her, mother to victim and accused, blinked slowly and began to cry. But never did mother and daughter break their gaze from the judge sitting across the table. Never did they share so much as a glance.

The bleak scene came as prosecutors tried to explain how a sibling argument exploded into lethal violence Tuesday morning, when the 14-year-old allegedly stabbed her sister dozens of times in a fury over the child's supposed ingratitude.

Multiple sources and public records, including her parents' divorce file, identify the victim as Dora Betancourt.

"This is quite a tragedy ... There's a lot of grief going on right now," Mundelein Mayor Steve Lentz said at a news conference. "Please pray for us."

Authorities did not offer much information on the sisters' relationship, but the Facebook page belonging to the 14-year-oldwhom the Tribune is not naming because she has been charged as a juvenile-shows the two smiling together in several photographs.

"They would play in the front yard often," said neighbor Matthew McCoy, who lives a few doors down on Woodhaven Court.

"The oldest girl would help the young girl do cartwheels."

Dora attended St. John Lutheran School in Libertyville. Her family has been a member of St. John Lutheran Church for years, said

WHAT'S NEXT?

The 14-year-old faces juvenile charges of first-degree murder. Lake County State's Attorney Mike Nerheim said he will consider in the weeks ahead whether to prosecute her as an adult. She is due back in juvenile court Jan. 31.

Steven Fuoco, an attorney for the school and church.

Liam Welch, 14, went to elementary school with the 14-year-old girl and got back in touch in recent months. He said the alleged attack was utterly out of character for his friend, whom he described as funny and caring.

*If somebody at our school was having a really hard time, she was always there for them to make them feel better," he said.

Kasten said the 14-year-old, still angry over a previous night's argument, allegedly got a knife from the kitchen and went to Dora's bedroom. She began to stab her sister, saying with each wound inflicted that the younger girl was not thankful for what she had done, Kasten said.

NATO terror suspect: 'We're ... spaced out'

Chicago Tribune

On more than two dozen recordings played for jurors Wednesday, the man alleged by prosecutors to be the central figure in a terrorist plot during the 2012 NATO summit in Chicago comes across as a stoner trying to impress the female undercover police officer who'd befriended him.

Brian Church, 22, is on trial with Jared Chase, 29, and Brent Betterly, 25, on charges they plotted attacks against Chicago police, Mayor Emanuel's house and President Obama's campaign headquarters. The so-called NATO 3, who had driven here from Florida, were arrested after filling four empty beer bottles with gasoline with the aid of two undercover Chicago officers at the Bridgeport home where they were staying with 12 others.

Defense attorneys argue that prosecutors have turned a simple vandalism or possession of explosives case into a "terrorist show trial."

Putting on their first terrorism case, Cook County prosecutors on Wednesday played 3t of the 55 recordings captured by the undercover officers.

Church at times used extremely violent language and seemed intent on fighting with police and vandalizing property. But much of the dialogue jurors heard Wednesday sounded less like terrorist plotting and more like a Judd Apatow film.

Church talks about his love for the popular "Grand Theft Auto" video game franchise and his housemates' plans to brew beer, acknowledges he's usually high and apologizes for his lack of initiative in planning or carrying out the plots.

"[Bleep], every time we're [bleeping] spaced out," Church, described by his lawyers as a marijuana addict, told the undercover officers at a May 6 meeting, "I wish we could get more done."

South Chicago on Sunday saw Chicago's first double homicide of the year, according to a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data.

Two men, ages 18 and 35, were shot to death in the 9100 block of South Commercial Avenue, officials said.

Chicago logged 11 double homicides last year, down from 24 double homicides in 2012, according to RedEve data.

In the past week, gunshot homicides were recorded in Austin, Chatham, Chicago Lawn, Englewood, Portage Park and South Lawndale, RedEye determined.

Fifteen homicides have been logged so far this year. Forty-four homicides were recorded in January 2013, RedEye found.

Woman charged with abandoning alligator

Chicago Tribune

An Oakbrook Terrace woman has been charged with animal cruelty and reckless conduct after leaving a baby alligator to fend for itself at O'Hare in November.

Alexis T. Prokopchuk, 29, was charged with animal cruelty and reckless conduct, both misdemeanors after she was arrested around noon Tuesday in Chicago, according to police. She was ordered held on $5,000 bail.

"Allie," as the 25-inch gator was dubbed, was spotted underneath an escalator in the lower level of Terminal 3 on Nov. 1. It was in poor condition, suffering from soft bones from an improper diet, among other things, authorities said at the time.

Police managed to whisk it into a box, and Allie was transferred to the care of the Chicago Herpetological Society.

Prokopchuk had been spotted on surveillance cameras on the Blue Line holding the gator and then entering the lower level of Terminal 3, where she let it loose, according to a police report.

Prokopchuk told officers she and her exboyfriend took the gator from a friend who was going to flush it down the toilet, the report said.

Then, on Nov. I, she "was so [high] on crack cocaine and heroin and had taken some pills," that she lost the gator after coming to the airport, the report said.

Snowden denies Russian connection to NSA leaks

Fugitive whistleblower Edward Snowden has denied intimations from U.S. politicians that he colluded with Russian intelligence operatives to steal classified information from the National Security Agency.

In a rare interview said to have been conducted via encrypted email from his refuge in Moscow, Snowden told the New Yorker magazine that "this 'Russian spy' push is absurd."

In the New Yorker interview, Snowden points out that he first flew to Hong Kong after deciding to leave the NSA and expose what he considered intrusive and excessive snooping by the intelligence agency into the personal communications of millions of Americans and citizens abroad.

When he arrived in Moscow in June, his U.S. passport had been canceled and he was stuck in a transit no-man's land at Sheremetyevo International Airport for 40 days while Russian authorities mulled his request for asylum, Snowden told the magazine.

"Spies get treated better than that," he said of his lessthan-enthusiastic welcome last summer.

Snowden also pointed out that he would have ended up taking refuge in Cuba if the U.S. government hadn't

SNOWDEN IN SCOTLAND?

Snowden's inability to travel freely would seem to be an obstacle to his chances of taking up the reported opportunity of becoming rector at Glasgow University in Scotland. European media reported Wednesday that the U.S. fugitive has been nominated for the job representing students and will be a candidate against cyclist Graeme Obree, writer Alan Bissett and clergyman Kelvin Holdsworth when students vote on Feb. 17-18.

rescinded his passport, preventing him from traveling onward to Havana as had been his plan when he left

"I was only transiting through Russia," he told the magazine. "But the State Department decided they wanted me in Moscow and canceled my passport."

Snowden was granted temporary asylum in Russia in August, and remains unable to travel internationally for fear of arrest and extradition to the United States, where he is wanted on felony charges of stealing government property and disclosing classified information.

Olympic officials tackle protestor

A gay Russian protestor was detained Saturday for waving a rainbow flag as the Olympic torch moved through his hometown north of Sochi. the Associated Press reports. A video appears to show the man, whom the AP identified as Pavel Lebedey, running along the side of the road bearing a rainbow flag. Olympic staffers scuffle with him before hauling him to the sidewalk.

Report: Debt ceiling will be hit in Feb.

The Obama administration warned Congress on Wednesday that the government would likely run out of borrowing authority needed to help pay its bills by late February if lawmakers do not swiftly raise the federal debt ceiling. Previously, the administration had projected the borrowing authority could last until as late as early March.

Israel claims foiling al-Qaida attack plot

Israeli intelligence officials said Wednesday they had arrested three Palestinians with links to al-Qaida who were planning a campaign of terrorist attacks across Israel, including a plot to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv. The intelligence agency Shin Bet announced that it arrested two members of the cell on Dec. 25. A third suspect was arrested Jan. 6.

2nd chemical entered W.Va water

West Virginia regulators have ordered Freedom Industries to immediately disclose all materials involved in the recent spill that contaminated the water supply of 300,000 people, after the chemical company said there was a second chemical, a mixture of polyglycol ethers, or PPH, that entered the Elk River.

Hawks and Wings give us a taste of the Olympics

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

Normally when the Blackhawks and Red Wings face off, the storyline is all about how much these teams hate each other. That's all well and good (bad?), but just once we thought we'd introduce some civility to the rivalry. For example, the Hawks and Wings both will send 10 players to the Olympics next month. So who earned medals Wednesday night? Let's find out. (For the record, Detroit won 5-4 in a shootout.)

CHSOSA@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYESPORTSCHI

FIRST PERIOD

Gold: Marian Hossa. For scoring his sixth goal in his past six games. That even got a half-smile from the normally stoic superstar.

Silver: Andrew Shaw. For sticking with a wildly bouncing puck and depositing it in the net for a 2-0 lead. His goals can be ugly, but luckily they count the same.

Bronze: Henrik Zetterberg. For not punching Pierre McGuire in the face for referring to him in the third person in their pregame conversation. That's impressive restraint.

Blackhawks 2, Red Wings 2

SECOND PERIOD

Gold: Gustav Nyquist. A goal and an assist for the 24-year-old Red Wings forward in the second period. The Hawks aren't about stand for that, are they?

Silver: Patrick Sharp. For blasting one home to make it 3-2. He's rockin' the clean-shaven look for this contest. Beard or no beard, that's one handsome man.

Bronze: The goalpost. The Hawks penalty kill owes this stand-up guy—or they would have been dealing with a two-goal deficit.

Red Wings 4, Blackhawks 3

THIRD PERIOD

Gold: Marcus Kruger. The defensiveminded forward delivered a huge goal to tie it.

Silver: Corey Crawford. He saved the Hawks more than once in the third.

Bronze: Red Wings fans. For not showing up.

Blackhawks 4, Red Wings 4

SHOOTOUT

Gold: Darren Helm. Hit the clinching shot. Game over.

Red Wings 5, Blackhawks 4

RedEve

Uncle Jesse isn't the only one who can play this game. With the news that the men of "Full House" have reassembled for a Super Bowl commercial, we've got some powerhouse '90s reunion ideas of our own.

Vampire Slayer'

When you think vampires, you think blood. Or better yet, bloody marys. Which is where Mike Ditka and his signature Kick Ass mix come in. It's vampires, it's football-it works on so many levels!

'Hang Time'

As the stars get older, all those hours on the court are tough on the body. The cast—and especially coach Dick Butkusneed something for the pain. Someone's gotta step up: Tylenol? Aleve? Bayer?

'Family Matters'

Doesn't matter what they're selling. We just really, really want to see this cast together again. Though preferably it'd be something that screams "Chicago." Our vote: Portillo's. Aaaaand now we're hungry.

'Clueless'

This show was all about style, or at least pretended to be, so surely some high-class designer could use these stars to make a buck or two. Get Christian Dior executives on the phone, stat.

Chicago will never be second-best for Hannibal Buress

By Sean Ely | REDEYE

For so many comedians, New York City is the goal.

The path? Work hard, write new material, perform as many times as you can on stage in a week, get noticed and then move to the Big Apple ... never looking back.

The road for Hannibal Buress—who has lived in New York for five years—follows that general direction. Until, of course, you get to that last part.

"Chicago is where I'm from," said the 30-year-old comic while enjoying a drink at Old Town Ale House during a trip home for the holidays. "It's where my family is. It's where my friends are, the venues are. My whole life ... this is what I love."

And Chicago loves Buress right back. His show Saturday at the Vic Theatre, also being filmed as a one-hour special for Comedy Central, sold out in just two days. "Nonsense" is set to air March 29.

As for his life in New York, Buress performs Sundays at Brooklyn's Knitting Fac-

Chicago is where I'm from. It's where my family is. It's where my friends are, the venues are. My whole life ... this is what I love."

-Hannibal Buress on visiting Chicago

tory as part of a weekly comedy show that he hosts. Legends like Dave Chappelle and Louis C.K. have even dropped in unannounced to perform.

Buress is a featured regular on Comedy Central's "Broad City," which premiered Wednesday—he plays bad girl Ilana's (Ilana Glazer) on-again, off-again hookup. He'll get his own pilot on the network sometime in the future as part of a multi-platform deal he signed last year. And while you may not recognize him, he's co-starring as Crisco on FX's new animated series, "Chozen."

But as someone who constantly travels and seems to be popping up on stages and TV screens across the country, Buress admits both friends and fans forget how often he gets back to his hometown.

"I'm back here all the time," Buress said, laughing. "But people are always like, 'Man, Hannibal, when are you coming backen man?' I come back once a month, sometimes twice. I'm always back here."

HANNIBAL SOLO

We asked Hannibal Buress 20 random questions to get to know the comedian better. Here are some of our favorites, se.

Favorite Chicago neighborhood? Logan Square, Wicker Park. Lend up there a lot.

One word to describe living in NYC? Expensive.

If Hannibal Buress weren't a comedian, he would be a ... basketball coach.

Favorite restaurant in Chicago? Diner Grill.

Have you taken a selfle this week? I take sellies but I don't post [them]. My girlfriend is out of the country, so we send pictures, but I don't post selfles. ... There's something about the angle that I hate.

Do you think Miley Cyrus is a good kisser? Yeah, I think so. I think she's a good kisser. She talks about being on Molly and [bleep], so she probably gets down.

Hannibal Buress looks a lot like that guy from ... the National Rental Car commercial... Or also any black dude with glasses.

If you were ordering Mayor Emanuel a drink at a bar, what would you order him? I would order him something that would knock him out, and then I would take his phone and (bleeping) try to break the (parking) contracts.

Who is your favorite Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle? Michelangelo. Pizza, nunchucks, goofy. Yeah, I related to him. .. Did anyone ever bone April? Or no? She was just kicking it. She friend-zoned the whole crew.

This new South Loop bar is primed for live music and plenty of conversation. We stopped in to chat about the second polar vortex, music, poetry and who's keeping up with New Year's resolu-TIONS, LEON ANDREW HENSLEY, FOR REDEYE

Kevin Coval 38, poet/director of nonprofit Young Chicago Authors

What brings you out tonight?

I'm here to support Nico (Donnie Trumpet) and I read a poem at the top of the show. I'm certainly going to miss him when he moves to L.A. Tell me more about your nonprofit.

We're Young Chicago Authors and the poetry festival that we throw, Louder Than a Bomb, is the largest poetry gathering on the planet. I started it 14 years ago along with poets. teachers and students who wanted to create a different kind of cultural space in Chicago where young people can gather and share their stories across every imaginable boundary. Did you have any resolutions you're still working on?

I want to make good rituals to make good habits. I'm just trying to get to the gym more and sit in the chair more. Writers have got to sit in

Andre 'Auggie the 9th' Findley

What are you drinking tonight and why? Lactually don't drink, which is crazy, right? I would say my drink of choice is cranberry juice

Did you have any resolutions this year and how are you keeping up with them?

To see my family way more, no matter what the cost is. I saw my sister yesterday, so I'm gaining momentum.

Are you ready for the next wave of the polar

I do a lot of biking around town, so I'm not! The hands are the first to go, It's ridiculous, Even people that have lived here for a long time are saying, "Nope. This is my last year here."

Vinita Hobson 24, hairstylist

What brings you out tonight?

I'm here with a friend who is supporting an artist that's performing-the trumpet player. What are you drinking tonight and why? I'm drinking pinot noir. I'm trying to take it easy because I have to be at the salon in the morning.

As a hairstylist, what's going on in your world as far as trends?

Well, everybody is into the natural right now-the afros, dreadlocks and big curly hair. Everything is more organic. Whatever grows out of your scalp, let it rock.

The breast question asked

Pulley

Why do women wear cleavage-baring shirts if you don't want us to stare at your breasts? -Want To Know

Dear Want.

Why do men write questions like this if you don't want me to make fun of you?

OK, yes, sometimes women wear revealing clothing to stand out, get attention or for validation. (Similarly, we imagine you're not wearing that Ed Hardy shirt for humanitarian reasons.) But staring at anything for more than a few seconds is just weird. Try it. Stare at somebody's baby with a blank expression for a minute and see if it doesn't earn you a breast pump to the eye.

Staring at things, even the wondrousness that is boobs, is plain of bad manners-just as your mother, whose decolletage we bet you had no trouble avoiding, always said. In conclusion, sir, we kindly ask you to take a few surreptitious glances at whatever sliver of skin a woman dares to bare in this weather, appreciate it and then go back to your "Game of Thrones" drinking game or whatever it was you were doing,

DIY bookends

By Veronica Wilson | FOR REDEYE

Every bookworm wants his or her own personal library—preferably the one from "Beauty and the Beast." Realistically, there probably isn't room for something so grand in that one-bedroom apartment. Making your own bookends is a great way to start—they show off your favorite conversation starters and also tell people a little more about yourself. They are completely customizable and will help those random piles of books look a little more organized.

VERONICA WILSON IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

What you'll need:

- » Four pieces of scrap wood (approximately 6 in. x 6 in. x 10 in. and up to 1 in. thick)
- » Sandpaper
- » Brush-on paint in the color of your choice
- » Paintbrush
- » Mod Podge
- » Glue gun

- » Two small random objects, no larger than the piece of the wood (This is how you customize. Use anything from a plastic toy tiger to a vintage camera to a ceramic owl. They don't have to match, but they should coordinate.)
- » Spray paint in the color of your choice (optional)

- 1. Sand down the wood until smooth.
- 2. Paint all sides with the brush-on paint. You can do a solid color, use painter's tape to make a cool design or, if you've got the talent, freehand. Once all sides are dry, seal it. Mod Podge works great if you use wood from the craft store.
- 3. Squeeze a small amount of glue from the gun along the skinny edge of one piece of wood. Attach it to another piece at a 90-degree angle. Do the same with the other two pieces. If it seems unsteady, put some more glue around the joint—you can paint over it. Let dry.
- 4. If you like the way your random objects look with your painted wood, leave them as-is. If you went the dollar-store-toy route, spray paint them to make them a little fancier. Some metallic gold paint can make that $1 toy look like it cost significantly more.
- 5. Once the objects are dry, use your glue gun to stick them to the inside of your 90-degree angle. Let dry.
- 6. Grab a pile of books, set the bookends on either side and suddenly you have a very stylish start to the library of your dreams.
- TIP: For an interesting design, head to a store like Paper Source or Dick Blick, where you can buy beautiful patterned paper. Measure it to fit your wood pieces and decoupage the paper using Mod Podge, being sure to smooth it over the wood. If you do this, choose simple objects to put on the outside so your bookends don't look too busy.

LOCAL LOOK

UNA MAE'S 1 1528 N. MILWAUKEE AVE. 773-276-7002

By Lauren Krause I FOR REDEYE

Step inside Wicker Park shop Una Mae's and you'll find retro pendant lamps, a plushy couch and a display table made from repurposed chairs and doors—it's got that laid-back vibe your hip aunt and uncle's place probably had in the '70s. Although Una Mae's specializes in vintage clothing, the shop also carries brand-new threads for both men and women as well as jewelry and home goods.

I found this incredible army jacket (Blu Pepper, $68), albeit with a slight identity crisis. The front and sides are traditional canvas and cotton, but the back is a knit sweater complete with a vibrant yellow and blue pattern. I knew this would be the item that would anchor my look, so I chose a simple gray tee (Billabong, $34), but added a long necklace (Flea Market Girl, $45) for a flash of metallic. I added black faux-leather leggings (Plastic by Gly, $88) and booties with a thick wood heel (I Shoes, $100), I finished this look with a bright yellow hat (Brixton, $46) because I knew the color would really pop with the back of the jacket.

Where to wear it: casual Friday, running errands or sipping cocktails with friends at your favorite bar.

TIP: Colors don't always need to be a perfect match. The yellow in the hat wasn't an exact fit with the sweater, but because they're in the same family, the pairing worked.

If you want to follow the gospel of Katy Perry, here's what you've gotta do

By Dana Moran I REDEYE

Forget Cosmo, Allure, Vogue and Elle. (OK, she'll definitely still be appearing in those mags, too.) Katy Perry found a home for February on the cover of GQ magazine. A writer followed Katy backstage at November's American Music Awards (the one where she dressed like a geisha) for an inside look at her creative process, and got PLENTY of personal deets. Enough, almost, to form an entire belief system. So if you wanna live like KP, you've gotta have faith. DAMORANGTRIBUNE.COM I GREDEVEDANA
